10 Par 4

One of the most difficult holes on the course, the tee shot demands precision as the fairway narrows the farther the ball travels and the long hitters can reach the hazard. This is also necessary to help with the approach shot which requires a forced carry to an elevated green that runs away from the golfer.

11 Par 3

Water, water, everywhere. A pond in front, a lake to the right and a stream to the left help to make this long par 3 the most difficult on the course. In addition, the green's false front and sole bunker demands a correct club selection on the tee.

12 Par 4

Another precise tee shot is required as the severely sloping left to right fairway brings the right rough and bunker into play. The inevitable side hill lie for the second shot will encourage a left to right approach so be sure to evade the front right bunker of this relatively flat green.

13 Par 5

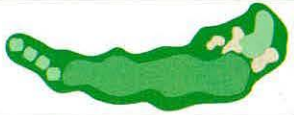
A definite three shot hole. Even for the long hitters the risk is too great to go for it in two. The second shot should favor the right side of the hill short of the fairway bunker. Anything that comes up short on the left will be blocked from the green by the tree line. The small green is well protected by the largest bunker on the course.

14 Par 3

The depth of the green makes this par three very difficult to hit. Don't miss long as anything over the green runs down the hill into healthy, thick rough that leaves a chip back to a green that runs away from you.

15 Par 4

Long hitters will do better leaving the driver in the bag and anything on the left side brings rough, trees and bunkers into play.



16 Par 4

The fairway slopes severely from right to left so favor the right side from the tee. Any drive long and left brings the trees and bunkers into play on the second shot. The flat green is very accessible from the fairway which makes this a good birdie hole.

17 Par 5

With a tree lined fairway on both sides, precision is required off the tee. A long and accurate drive will make this par 5 very reachable in two but come up short on your approach and greenside bunkers can turn that potential birdie in to a probable bogey.

18 Par 4

A demanding finishing hole. The tee shot must clear the creek while avoiding the staggered bunkers left and right as well as trees. This will leave you with a middle to long iron uphill approach to a large green protected by the front left bunker.
